

BRUCE HAZEN, Career and Management Consultant

Bruce has extensive and diverse industry experience as an internal and external management consultant, member of corporate staff and line management. Arenas of work have included electronics, financial services, health care, education, public utility sector, community services, and global civil engineering. No stranger to mergers and acquisitions, he was a member of a regional management team that successfully managed the merger of three companies into an industry leading healthcare firm.

As an executive coach and career management professional, Bruce applies the diversity of his consulting and management background to the advantage of clients interested in measurable development of their professional effectiveness and that of their team or organization. His background ensures a balanced approach that simultaneously covers individual needs as well as critical issues of the business.

He has a BS in Industrial and Labor Relations from Cornell University, with emphasis in organizational behavior and psychology. In addition, he holds a MS in Clinical Psychology and has practiced as a therapist.
